Over the last 10 years, I had the privilege of working with various clients such as McDonald's, AVON, World Health Organization, and many more which taught me how to align design decisions with business goals.

Working with a team of developers gave me a clear understanding of the connection between technology and design while conducting usability testing provided invaluable insights into the relationship between design and user behavior.

This translates to design that solves business needs while bringing delightful experiences for the most important, but the often-overlooked group - users.
